

News release—08March2010

For Immediate Release

Contact:

Kit Horton

kit@horton.com

303-545-6964

Boulder Photographer Wins Top International Award:

You never know when or where the Muse will strike

Boulder, Colorado, USA, 8 March 2010

William Horton, a Boulder, Colorado, photographer, has won Camera Obscura Journal's Outstanding Professional Photography Award, announced Monday, March 1. Along with publication in the upcoming issue of the journal, Mr. Horton received a monetary prize.

The work, entitled "I'm Here!", depicts a mother mountain goat coaxing her child up a shear wall to join its sibling.

The semi-annual competition was open to professional and amateur photographers worldwide. The theme for this competition was the meaning of the word "Bond."

"We received some great entries and narrowing down the finalists was a tough call," said M.E. Parker, Editor in Chief of Camera Obscura. "The winner's photograph as well as those of some of the finalists will appear in the journal in April," added Mr. Parker.

When asked about the award, William said, "I am delighted and surprised by this award and the chance to share the poignant moment captured in this photograph."

William Horton Photography primarily photographs classic cars, classic architecture, and classic landscapes. You can learn more about him at www.horton.com/photos. To view more of his photos, go to williamhorton.zenfolio.com or www.flickr.com/photos/williamhorton/

Entry photograph: WilliamHorton.zenfolio.com/p914852303/e112a7d69. If you need a copy, contact kit@horton.com.

Photograph of William Horton: horton.com/billphotos.aspx

Horton bio: www.horton.com/photosite/aboutwilliam.htm

Camera Obscura Journal: www.obscurajournal.com